12. JOBS - The Policewoman

Hello, I'm Sally. I am 25 years old. I'm a police officer. I work at a police station. But often I'm not in the office, but on the street. We're just everywhere. The homeless comes to us as well as the super rich man whose car has just been stolen. That's why police officers experience things that other people never experience. No two days are the same. We help children who have been beaten by their parents, catch thieves and write tickets for people who drove too fast. Our main task is to protect people and ensure order and security. Training to become a policeman is difficult. It lasts about 3 years. You have to know the laws well and what someone can or cannot do. A police officer needs a driver's license and he must be able to handle a pistol, radio and other devices. In addition, police officers must be athletic, as they have to act quickly and correctly in dangerous situations. It is also important that they can work well with their colleagues. After basic training, the police officers usually work in a patrol car or regulate traffic on a road. They can also be found at police stations or as companions on difficult transports. They also protect special places or vulnerable people, such as the most important politicians.

Answer the questions

- Where does Sally work?
- Does she always stay in the office?
- Why is her work so interesting?
- What are the duties of a police officer?
- How long does the training last?
- Why do police officers have to be athletic?
- Have you ever needed a police officer? What for?
- What happened?
- Would you like to be a police officer? Why? Why not?
- What is your dream job? Why?
